

Late Bloom Homestead

Our suburban homestead has seen many changes. The first thing we did at our house was build a garden bed in the backyard. All that we had on our .26 acre when we moved in and bought our first home in June of 2009 was a potted plant left on the porch from the previous owners and a live oak tree in the front. What we didn't know or see from the curb, was the potential that would and could grow over the next several years. Many of the projects shown on our website have forgone more upgrades and remodels than displayed. I will do my best to recapture the essence of transformation but sometimes the battery is dead and there's not enough daylight.
